

-----GENERALNEWS-----

Hi All

We have copies of the unique double CD of the Schallwelle issue 21.
A great CD with a big list of superb musicians on it.
For all orders over 3 CDs we will have a copy as long as stock lasts.
We only have a very limited amount available so don't wait to long!!
We have played a track in Dreamscape radio.

<http://www.dreamscaperadio.nl>

And the new Tangerine Dream is on the way!

Tangerine Dream - RECURRING DREAMS (cd) 71006

2019. contains new studio versions of classic TD tracks by the current line-up and one reworked track by Edgar Froese..

Emmanuel D'haeyere (part of Age) - SHADOWS BEHIND ME (cdr) 80042

This has been announced by a colleague as the new AGE but this is NOT the case!!
It is a solo album by Emmanuel that is very emotional and more ambient then his regular AGE music, I think it is really good!!

And a new Harald Nies is just released,

Nies, Harald - CIRCLE (cdr) 81285

Anyone who has already studied the music of Harald Nies will know that Mr. Nies is a friend of forms. In addition to Fractal, Axial or Torodial, there is now another mathematical form: The Circle. This explains the title of his new album. Musically, mathematics plays no role. Much more his music is free of everything. For Harald Nies there seem to be no rules. In 11 pieces he celebrates his very own kind of electronic music. Rhythmic, melodic, sequencer-based, epic, all carried by a light but always positive melancholy and his typical groove. Very recommendable.

I am a big fan of his music and I hope to have it in very soon!

Boddy, Ian - SPECTROSCOPIC (3-lp) 31099

There are a limited quantity of these beautiful box sets available at Groove. Music year's out of print and never reissued by Ian him self. With several unreleased tracks from this same time period of 1979 - 1982. Don't wait to long as gone is really gone!!

And the new GR-285 - Gert Emmens - Somewhere is in stock.

A new Gert Emmens but this time of a different style of music.

<http://www.groove.nl/index3.html>

For 6 years Gert Emmens worked on his second progrock album Somewhere. Compared with it's predecessor Memories, Somewhere sounds more seventies, and all the electronic music influences that could still be found on Memories are gone.

Gert Emmens played all the instruments himself, including acoustic drums and guitar. Emmens is influenced by Steve Hackett, Tony Banks, Eddie Jobson and others.

You can listen to tracks on the following site and there is a track in Dreamscape radio.

<http://www.gertemmens.com/>

We have the very first cd of NEULAND (BAUMANN & HASLINGER) - NEULAND (2CD-2019 ALBUM/EX-TANGERINE DREAM PAIR) in stock!!

there is a track in Dreamscape radio.

<http://www.groove.nl/index3.html>

This Double CD set contains all 15 tracks from Peter Baumann & Paul Haslinger's NEULAND!

"Long-awaited" doesn't even begin to describe NEULAND!!!

After all, its core synth cadets (former TANGERINE DREAM members Peter Baumann and Paul Haslinger) first work-shopped a record under a different name (BLUE ROOM) nearly 30 years ago!

NEULAND started the way many long overdue projects do: with Paul Haslinger and Peter Baumann asking themselves, "Why isn't there anything out there like this?" In their case, that meant a deeply immersive debut album that's respectful of their roots in TANGERINE DREAM but exists on its own astral plane. Far more restless than most ambient records, the pair's self-titled album is both focused and freeing, alluding to everything from weightless grime melodies to windswept film scores.

NEULAND is ultimately the sound of something entirely new!

NEW RELEASES! (check for in stock and release dates!)

gr-274 Stephan Whitlan & Ron Boots - Three Day Week

Take two musicians! Two veterans with opposing visions and lock them in a room heated by sequencers and synthesizers with the challenge of creating rhythms without synth solos, not even Stephan Whitlan's, and you'll get an album like THREE DAY WEEK. The connection between the ideas of Ron Boots and Stephan Whitlan has been proven with Substitutes. The two musicians, backed up by Harald Van der Heijden on drums, had been filling an hour for a crowd in waiting for the main act with improvised music at the E-Day 2018. Whence Substitutes which had been very well received by Ron Boots' fans, those of the Groove label and the specialized press in EM. And it's precisely after this last E-Day 2019 festival that the two musicians decided to revive their ideas in another context of pure improvisation. This time, Boots & Whitland will be focus on the sequencer aspect. And it's the fruit of these improvisation sessions that guided the making of THREE DA Y WEEK. Both musicians judged these parts interesting enough to be offered to fans of the Berlin School model with Dutch and England visions. The other parts, including the drums always performed by Harald Van der Heijden, were added to finalize an album made in relaxation but with the idea of exploding our speakers.

Fish starts in sweetness. Synth shadows draw arches that float in the dark, causing particles to crumble and leaving their footprints slowly evaporate. Tinted by mysticism, the mood begins to breathe after the door of 5 minutes. A pulsation makes tinkle its resonances which multiply in secret to initiate a rhythmic lift that will siege for the next 27 minutes. Moiré arpeggios and discrete sequences, flowing like suspended rivulets, are at the origin of this structure, which is silently wrapped in layers of mist and by voices of an absent choir. Tactilely exploiting Fish's minimalist approach, the Boots & Whitland duo adds rhythmic particles that give the sound weight to this long title designed to receive a large inventory of sequences and percussive elements. Among the dancing arpeggios, some have a more harmonious level and trace these evasive melodies that adorn so well these structures set with magnetizing loops. Fish progresses in this setting where percussion, frolicking like a core of dragonflies frozen in time, add to the charms of this rhythmic boom which grips its atmospheres. Without exploding, but constantly accumulating a vigor that will remain contained in its space-time, the passive rhythm of Fish brings us to a final that gets emptied of its percussive elements. And in the end, Fish is 34 minutes of a latent rhythm growing in volume and intensity in a tubular plexiglass corridor that is gradually widening from the inside. A bit long, but the intensity in it makes it pass rather quickly.

My favorite is this ode to the serenity of space that is Alpaca. The movement is celestial with 4 chords that walk quietly on the edge of a cosmic ocean, with as a traveling companion a bass line less docile to the idea of walking 9 minutes. These arpeggios gather in places to blow us a nice melody that gave me the shivers at times. Especially with these synth shadows that are like maternal caresses. More hypnotic than minimalist, this astral procession is adorned with ether vapors, as well as whispers and noises camouflaged by distance. I loved it. This goes in my iPod, section; minutes to daydream and fall asleep! I always thought of being in Alpaca's beach when the moods of Eagle get to my ears. Its introduction is multicoloured of sonorous textures that come and go on an oblong circular movement of the sequencer. Acid winds, lamentations of sounds and twisted reverberations pour into this opening that has already exhausted 11 minutes in ambiosonic and ambiospheric elements when finally, Harald Van der Heijden comes to lend his hands to two sequencers awakening. Eagle gets flying! Its rhythm is lively, bec a use of the drums, and spasmodic, because of the sequencers. It's especially inviting with an acoustic-electronic mesh whose only winner are my ears. In fact, it lacks only synth solos to make it all perfect. What was not planned in this THREE DAY WEEK focused on sequencers and their dimensions that are not always rhythmic.

Despite some lengths, this latest album of Ron Boots and Stephan Whitlan has all the assets in needed to please fans of EM. There are three different structures that each have their own charms; minimalist, melodious and ambient rhythms as well as quite lively with an Eagle that breaks the house. I enjoyed its discovery a little more with my headphones, although the mastering allows listening it on speakers, and it filled my listening room with power and precision. A very nice achievement from Groove nl.

29310 Tangerine Dream - Rubycon

O.K. after the spooky year of "Phaedra", this CD begins with new ebbs and flows, thrills and chills, and spacey currents. This CD has some kinds of instruments like analog synthesizers, Mellotron choir and others. Thank You.
