

----- GENERAL NEWS -----

Hi All

Cool TD news,

Tangerine Dream - PILOTS OF THE PURPLE TWILIGHT (10-cd) 22693

Tangerine Dream follow up their superb In Search of Hades box set with another Virgin-era package. Pilots of the Purple Twilight: The Virgin Recordings 1980-1983 showcases the next chapter and features newly remastered versions of the albums Tangram, Thief, Exit, White Eagle, Logos, Hyperborea along with the previously unreleased soundtracks.

The soundtracks are for the films The Soldier, the 1982 movie directed by James Glickenhaus and The Keep from the 1983 movie directed by Michael Mann. All audio has been re-mastered from the original master tapes by Ben Wiseman.

Pilots of Purple Twilight also features additional previously unreleased material across four discs, including the full concert at The Dominion Theatre, London in November 1982.

In addition to this the soundtrack to Thief includes an extended promotional only version of 'Dr. Destructo', White Eagle features six bonus tracks recorded for the German television crime drama series Tatort (originally released on a 12-inch single and a seven-inch single in Germany only), all of which are released for the first time on CD and digitally.

Finally, Hyperborea includes five bonus tracks originally issued on the Virgin soundtrack LP for the movie Risky Business, including Tangerine Dream's biggest streaming track, Love On A Real Train.

The packaging is pleasingly consistent with the previous set and comes with a hardcover book with a new essay and many rare photographs and memorabilia.

Tangerine Dream - TYGER (RSD) (lp) 35439
Tangerine Dream - PHAEDRA RSD 2020 (2-lp) 36156

We get a few of the special Record Store Day LP's in. Virgin EMI is releasing a special version of Tangerine Dream's classic album Phaedra for Record Store Day 2020.

Phaedra was Tangerine Dream's first release after signing to Richard Branson's Virgin Records label.

The album was recorded at the Manor, the studio inside a manor house in Shipton-on-Cherwell in Oxfordshire, England, which was already celebrated by early 1974 as the location in which Mike Oldfield had created Tubular Bells. Phaedra was produced by Tangerine Dream founder Edgar Froese, who also painted the image on the album cover.

The original was released on February 20, 1974. The re-release features remastered audio, from from 2019's box set In Search Of Hades. The second LP of the set features bonus tracks from the Phaedra sessions. The release is pressed on 180g tangerine colored vinyl.

Record Store Day 2020 has been postponed from April 18, 2020 to June 20th, as a result of the Coronavirus Pandemic.

And a new release in the tone science series.

V/A - Tone Science Module No.4 Form and Function (digipak) (cd)

- Setting Sun by Batchas [7:42]
- Eternal Terrarium by Lightbath [6:40]
- Dream Portal by Panic Girl [5:20]
- Astral Plane by Andrew Huang [5:16]
- Blackstone Edge by Stefan Bojczuk [6:31]
- Different Paces by Ebcidic [6:33]
- Elements of Medical by Steve Davis [7:42]
- ex Machina by Mattia Cupelli [7:44]
- Myrdet av Gud by Tim Held [9:14]

Tone Science sub-label, from DiN records, continues to explore the world of modular synth music.

Following the success and critical acclaim of the first three Tone Science compilation albums, DiN label boss Ian Boddy has collated another nine tracks from musicians of varying backgrounds working in the realms of modular synthesis.

One of the challenges for Boddy in compiling the Tone Science albums is to get the track order flowing to reveal a musical structure. There's a certain amount of serendipity in this but for Tone Science V4 the shape of the album became very obvious early on. Opening with the beautiful abstract forms created on a vintage Paperface Serge system by Batchas the next two tracks feature gentle shimmering & undulating sequencer patterns from Lightbath & Panic Girl that instil a sense of calm & wonder.

This leads us to the middle section of the album where first Andrew Huang gently slows down proceedings with harmonic abstract patterns before Stefan Bojczuk twists the mood with a stark, moody atmosphere conjuring up images of the isolated landscape referenced in the title of his track, Blackstone Edge.

Things start to climb up to the sonic climax of the album with first Ebcidic providing a dark & dangerous pulsing sequence followed by a crazy psychedelic melange of a track from the inimitable Steve Davis. This is followed by a sledge hammer of audio from Mattia Cupelli with huge gnarly bass & TNT percussion from which there seems to be no escape.

After such an astonishing climax the longest track on the album by Tim Held at first appears to mirror the distorted tones of the previous track before a sense of calm ensues and the album finishes with a final long, beautiful breath.

“Tone Science Module No.4 Form and Function” continues the journey down the rabbit hole of possibilities and sound worlds inhabited by artists and musicians working in this ever fascinating and varied musical field.

89978 Ramp - No sleep

It took me almost ages before Stephen Parsick aka ['ramp] landed on my radars and as I already have mentioned somewhere, I still feel really ashamed of this mistake. Fortunately, since summer 2017 I stay deeply focused on this German virtuoso of profoundly nebulous and vigorously sequenced insignias. The end of August 2017 also marked a big return of ['ramp] with "Synchronize Or Die" CD, after 5 years of silence. Its follow-up "No Sleep 'Til Wilmersdorf" is out since May 2018 in a limited edition of 222 copies on Stephen's Doombient Music label.

The album is a journey back to the childhood days in the late 1970s, when Stephen Parsick lived in Wilmersdorf with his parents, at that time a village near Berlin. These memories are precisely displayed also by a 12-page front insert (designed by Bernhard Wöstheinrich). 11-plus minutes long "Compact Phasing A" unlocks this strikingly attractive ride with intensely evocative arrangements, Ian guidly meandering and introspectively narrating. Beauty! "No Sleep 'Til Wilmersdorf", the title composition clocking to nearly 17-minute mark, swiftly shifts into hauntingly elevated sequencer realms, where persistently pulsing signatures commingle with sinuously reflective traces. Soulfully kicking Berlin School reminiscences at its most hypnotic!!! The next piece, "Clouds Should Say", as indicated by its title, moves into serenely floating spheres persistently permeated by remotely ambiguous meridians and intangibly glimmering trceries. 8-minute "Haunted Hills" quickly returns to vividly textured sonic blissfulness, propelled by mesmerizingly sparkling sequences bridged with picturesquely evocative cascades. Perpetually oscillating and euphoniously magnificent performance showcasing ['ramp] at the very top of his musicianship!!! Bravo, Stephen, this is a Hall of Fame composition!!! "Salomon's Road" attracts with its joyful scenario, where pulsing vintage glitters relentlessly ju x tapose with euphorically traversing storytelling. Another strikingly melodious masterpiece! "Oedipus" directly dives into enigmatically subterranean domains and nearly 11 minutes long "Orphelia" safely keeps venturing through these terrains, although reinforced by resistantly curlicue helixes. "The Last One To Leave Is To Turn Off The Lights" closes the album in gorgeously serene solitude.

76-minute "No Sleep 'Til Wilmersdorf" needs to be explored and celebrated for its outstanding artistry, where a lush array of retro Berlin-School ingredients and sinuously darker time-lapses ignite an all-inclusive ride driven by unmistakably earmarking arrangements of its solitary spirit. A headphone listening is highly recommended for a fully rewarding sonic pleasure!!! "No Sleep 'Til Wilmersdorf" album ranks among many of my fave [ramp]'s and Stephen Parsick's gems including "Oughtibridge", "Return", "Ceasing To Exist" (with Markus Reuter), "Synchronize Or Die", "Cambrium: Music For P rotozoa" or "Hoellenengel" for example. Big applaud for [ramp]!!!

gr-286 Walter Christian Rothe - Secrets

What a beautiful album from Walter Christian Rothe! SECRETS is a collection of titles that should be listened to as a concept album, without it being one. The Belgian musician delves into his memories of a composer with moments that he considers more intense as sometimes more serene. This music on the art of composing spans memories collected in a period of more than 20 years. According to this quest, we must find here the extremes of his music which caresses strong moments of nostalgia, like experimental phases without forgetting the dramas he slept on his keyboards.

And always as sarcastic, he begins this collection with the thunderstorm in 19 seconds of Thunder. It is also the opening of African Hunt, and we believe in it with its nervous rhythm which has only of Africa, these African chants flowing on a spasmodic flow of the sequencer. The explosions in the crash of symphonic percussions add a dramatic effect, which does in Vangelis, in an electronic rock structure which becomes a little more tribal in the second part. And this part is totally boosted with a mesh of jerky orchestrations and short synth solos in a rhythm unified by a line of sequences and another one of arpeggios rolling unevenly on the irregularity of a conveyor. By the Sea is an incredibly beautiful melancholic melody that turns like those who were trapped in musical boxes decades ago. The piano is unbelievably beautiful. Playing on the bass as the higher notes, it extends a divine music inspired by the French cinema. It is too beautiful, and it reminds me of the music of Everything Fades into Mist from the album Alice. And although darker and slower, Under the Lotus Tree is in the same acoustic vision, except for orchestrations. This garden of sounds hosts a Japanese string instrument where the finely plucked chords resonate in arrangements that are both frightening, in particular with the samples of distraught voices and some are more spiritual. I hear a Kitaro's theatrical vision here. Suspect is a slow title that languid orchestrations makes suspect! You have to listen to a track like Le Periferique more than once in order to appreciate the artistic dimension of Walter C. Rothe, who here dresses like Mike Oldfield in an intense six minutes of minimalist electronic rock. The rhythm is actually catchy and serves as a basis for spreading the dexterity of the Belgian musician who multiplies synth solos and others chants like the trumpets, as well as acoustic guitar and electric guitar solos while handling percussion samples, as much tribal as rock, which are festive and wild. Jane D'Arc is a beautiful tear-extracting title with a piano and keyboard that scatter chords coming from the soul. The bass is poignant in this oneiric sweetness which becomes a ballad, always tear-extracting, dressed in a very New Age white veil when the percussions decide to shake the moods. The music blends with the disastrous orchestrations of Pierre Lachaise where this delicate magic piano is still tingling. For Tracy / Little Drummer Girl is another beautiful New Age lunar ride. Souvenir de Paris is a complex title that begins with a mini string orchestra supporting the ballad of the piano in a vision of music from the Baroque era. The movement changes direction after 2:30 to take a corridor of experimental progressive music with a path of groaning passion on disheveled percussion and a stream of sequences and arpeggios with jerky flow. The music returns to a calmer level after two minutes of artistic violence to die out with two lines of melodies cradled by these suggestive voices. It seems to me that Walter was influenced by Vangelis that I would not be surprised. A particularly good title if you like it a little more experimental. Salut Michel is an explosive title that sounds so much like Jean-Michel Jarre. Enough to think that it is he, himself who interprets a new composition imagined in the decor of Chronology . Walter Christian Rothe spreads his intimate secrets in SECRETS and his art of composition where electronic and acoustic visions refine their beauty on sometimes dramatic and often romantic structures. I was pleasantly surprised by the depth of the compositions on this album whose main asset is this lack of homogeneity which made me constantly travel through the emotions of Walter Christian Rothe.
