

-----GENERALNEWS-----

Hello All

Vangelis - Nocture

The new Vangelis - Nocture is in a beautiful album full of passion and warmth. This entire Piano played album (there are some Synth parts also!!) is kind of different then his normal Synth but is is unmistakable Vangelis.

And we have a special sale on the unique release of Blade Runner!
Special three disc edition featuring unreleased & bonus material.

Vangelis - Blade Runner special edition sale!

One of the best-loved soundtracks in the electronic music canon, the Blade Runner score is up there with the key works of John Carpenter in terms of its range of influence, and thanks to serial fiddler Ridley Scott and his incessant re-cutting tendencies, we now get to experience it all over again in an immense triple-disc edition released to coincide with the five-disc Blade Runner DVD odyssey that's currently doing the rounds.

The first disc features the score as was released on 1994's edition, while the second represents hitherto unreleased pieces and bonus material that appeared in the film but not on the original soundtrack release. The third disc is a special 25th anniversary revisitation of Vangelis' work on the film, comprised of new compositions based on the film. While the gratuitous sax scenes of the original soundtrack might have been a sign of the times, there's a certain garish quality to its usage on the new disc, but that said, it's still very much in-keeping with Vangelis' oeuvre, so no doubt fans will still lap it up, but it feels like an extra feature to the much-lauded material spread across those first two discs.

The foreword by the film's director, and knight of the realm, Sir Ridley Scott heaps praise on Vangelis' work, putting him right up there alongside contemporaries like Jerry Goldsmith and Hans Zimmer in the ranks of great modern film composers, but you'd also have to throw in some props for the amount of widespread public interest stirred up in electronic music in general, as a result of these compositions.

Price is now only $24.99 | £17.49 | €19.90

E-Day 2019

Last week we announced the performance of:

Thorsten Quaeschning & Ulrich Schnauss.

But after we announced it it came to light that Ulrich is having a performance in Spain on Friday the 5th.

And to be honest we just could not risk having run into problems with the timing of his flights etc for E-Day.

Many can remember last year when due to the Airline the gear of Ulrich was 12 hours missing and he could only play a shorted set!!

So together with the musicians we decided the following.

We will postpone the Thorsten Quaeschning & Ulrich Schnauss performance for this years E-Day.
But we will have something special on stage this time.
Thorsten Quaeschning and friends. We are planning a group formed around this extraordinary performer/ musician that will set the hall on fire.
We hope to have all the details next week (maybe not all but :-).
But for now we are planning something great for this years E-Day !!

Thanks for your time!
Ron Boots

Colisseum Music (CD/DDL 60:27)
(Theatrical e-rock & Berlin School)

This is what I call an excellent surprise. I would say even more; a brilliant album quite unexpected for those who know the ambient theatrical style of Gabriele Quirici, aka Perceptual Defence, , who this time team up with another Italian musician, Alessandro Ghera, aka Alexynth Project, a musician very at ease in his Electronica signature. Thus, "Adventus" marks the birth of a new duo of Italian synthesists who pulls out an electro-ambient style from their analog as well as digital equipment. The main idea behind Colisseum is to offer an EM inspired by the roots of the old city of Rome. And if the genre is melting Tangerine Dream elements from the 70's to progressive Italian music with a slight hint of Electronica, the goal reaches us straight in the ears with a quite unexpected freshness.

Winds of tones and breezes of voices encircle our ears at the opening of "Voices from the Tyrrhenian Sea". The stereo effect is almost authentic, and the sound envelope is more than realistic. It's in this level of excellence that a synth scatters its breaths of flutes on a parterre oozing of tones of an organic radiance. The sequencer projects the vision of this calm duck on the water and whose legs get activated in a lively static and flickering ballet, while the charm of the Mellotron operates more and more. Motionless, this rhythmic structure staggers while storing up an intensity from an eager sequencer while the synths inject Vangelis tunes on an interlacing of two lines of sequences. This staging unlocks on these ambient rocks of the Berlin School style with sequencers and lines of hybrid rhythms which hover with momentums of intensity before landing on a mattress of ambient elements rich in textures and in tonal colors. What pops to the ears once "Voices from the Tyrrhenian Sea" is ending is this rhythmic physiognomy stimulated in Chris Franke's influences as the atmospheres are carefully woven into a vision of ruins and decrepitude. Each title in "Adventus" projects an independent vision, even if a dark envelope encircles its dimensions. The sequencer and percussive effects in "Dances along the River" are just delightful to my ears. They are nervous and rely on a bass pulsation, structuring these rhythms that make us tap the fingers while being absorbed by the tonal texture which exploits the scents of TD, especially at the level of the voice riffs, and Vangelis in the synths' tunes. The dimension of the ambiances borrows a dark approach whose twinning with the rhythmic progression brings us into the territories of Near Dark. Intense, my ears are still vibrating, "Forum" lays down its emotions with the help of a piano which hammers its notes with strength, sometimes on a bed of mist and sometimes on a conveyor for active and static sequences. "In seventh Heaven" is much in the same genre, except that his progression is very TD style!

"Aeterno Convivium" is a heavy track which exploits the ascending rotations of its rhythm lines in a well calculated velocity level. The music here spits harmonies woven in the shadows of Tangram whose apparent fright is whistled by spectra rooted in a heavy structure. I'm totally blown away by this album and it's not over yet because "A.D. LXXII" does things very differently. From its introduction one feels that the music will take a path that will be in close collaboration with a mix of Synth-pop and Electronica, genre Propaganda with Jewel track, whose essences embalm a heavy electronic rock and its symphonic coat. But before, it's big rock with a guitar dragging its strata in a swirl of rhythm blown in the adrenaline of the sequencer. The rhythm borrows a stationary approach with a helicopter propeller effect which bickers with the winds, the symphonic coat points at these horizons, before resuming its frantic race. A superb title with a 2nd part even more soaked with thirst for rhythm with a guitar that still rages, a bit like if Thorsten Quaeschning was at the controls of this fat and juicy theatrical rock. After an introduction of atmospheres sewn in uncertainty, "Fasti Triumphales" lights up its Blues lanterns with a very ethereal guitar on a nest of motionless sequences and percussions. The ambience warms up and the intensity progresses to barter its first 4 minutes relatively without rhythms for a second part as much intense than wild. The sequencer, and its taste for a sneaky approach, and the effects of percussion-clappers add to the charms of this title that we will learn to love even more after a few listening. When reading the review, you don't expect me to write that "Tribute to the roman Ancestors" is the most intense track in "Adventus". A bit like its predecessor, it demands some additional listening and it swarms of a rhythmic intensity that makes me think of some good Picture Palace Music or yet Tangerine Dream of its recent period of Sonic Poem Series. I often put my involvement in the world of EM in question. I'm a bit tired and I wrote so many reviews in the past years. These are albums like "Adventus" that revives the flames of my passion. Colisseum gives us an intense album with a series of titles that surprises and charms in a heavy style that nevertheless leaves room for a vision of Italian poetry unique to the progressive music of this country. A huge surprise which lands in my Top 10 of 2018! Sylvain Lupari (October 23rd, 2018)

Changed prices in the catalog!

We have adjust over 300 prices in our Catalog..

Scroll down and we have listed the most interesting ones for you.

And we have since October lowered all Groove releases pre the GR-200 to a permanent price of only € 10.00 or less.

Some titles are already sold out and we will look at each title if it will be reprinted or not. So for a lot of these CDs it will be the case that if they are sold out, they will be only available the through downloads.

One of those CDs running out is Bernd Kistenmacher's Utopia.

Released in 2013 we are now down to the last copies and then the musical rights will go back to the artist. We are now offering this release for a very special price and gone is gone.

I have added the review in the review section so have a look!

Bernd Kistenmacher - Utopia (cd) $11.25 , £7.99 , €8.90

Don't wait to long to get this great release.

SHIPPING:

Due to the fact that we use a special shipping service that provides the shipping of parcels etc we don't have to adjust the shipping prices at this moment. One of the reasons is that because of you our costumers we can keep these prices so low. With over 1500 parcels shipped last year we can stay in the lowest shipping prices!

I am glad we are one of the few suppliers of EM that did not have to raise their shipping prices. So for the 4rth year in a row they stay the same!!
