Hello All

A special Box by Tangerine Dream - Live at Augusta Raurica is going to be released in the first week of March! This promises to be a very special release that I am looking forward to, it contains the concert on 8th September 2016 - the open air live concert of Tangerine Dream at the amphitheatre Augusta Raurica in Switzerland (close to the city Basel) was one of the first concerts TD performed after the death of Edgar Froese, head and founder of TD. The beautiful sight surrounded by an ancient Roman village, the fantastic ancient amphitheatre created a very special atmosphere for the magic music. Thorsten Quaeschning, Ulrich Schnauss and Hoshiko Yamane performed a great collection of classic TD tracks that night. Enjoy a contemporary document of Tangerine Dream's musical output. gr-243 Boots, Ron & others - An evening with friends

Following the Cosmic Nights 2018 review, "An Evening with Friends" is another CD produced by Ron Boots which was available at the Hello 2018! @ Zeiss Planetarium event held in Bochum (Germany) on December 30th, 2017. Divided over 2 shows, this 70-minute CD features 2 tracks played as part of the Schwingungen Party in Hamm (Germany) on July 1st, 2017 and 4 more tracks which were performed at the Awakenings Festival in November 2017 at the Lea Hall Social Club in Staffordshire, England. Two performances that testify to this complicity between Ron Boots, Frank Dorittke and Harald Van der Heijden and which also present the participation of Stephan Whitlan next to the trio for the concert at the Awakenings festival. On the program, Ron Boots' style of EM well wrapped in a vision of progressive rock unique to MorPheuSz'. And above all, a Frank Dorittke on fire! "A Warm Place" will surprise many fans with a Broekhuis, Keller & Schönwälder structure with the Repelen series. The introduction is geared towards a vaporous approach with keyboard keys which sound pretty much like Rick Wright along with tribal ethereal percussions. The roarings of the synth suggest a wild structure. But it's more like a bohemian ballad with a nice acoustic guitar which makes duel to some hanging arpeggios from Ron Boots' keyboard. Harald Van der Heijden is the equivalent of Bas Broekhuis here with a very good acoustic percussion play which is as seductive as enchanting. But it's Frank Dorittke's agile fingers that steal the show here in a beautiful piece of music that's more acoustic than electronic, even with the good solos from Ron Boots, which in some places have this perfume of absent flute. A very charming title full of romance that is quite unexpected from the members of MorPheuSz. By the by, "Not Yet There" is in the pure tradition of this group set up by Ron Boots. The introduction spits out its nebulous vapors, I hear sordid meows, while the sequencer weaves the threads of a rhythm which gallops of its fluid oscillations. The guitar adjusts and the synth releases sibylline vapors and perfumes of flutes which float with harmonic designs. Harald Van der Heijden beats up the ambiances which are also supported by Frank D and his crumbled riffs here and there. The structure goes through an ambio-sonic phase around 8 minutes, there are strong fragrances of Tangerine Dream at this moment, before returning with more vigor thanks to the resonant steps of the sequencer which throws "Not yet There" in a huge heavy and lively progressive electronic rock. "Lea Hall Brawl" leads us to the 2017 Awakenings festival with a new sound environment. I found the sound more limpid, less dark filtered on this second part of the CD. The introduction is made up of mists rushes which ripple with clinking prisms. A bass layer spreads a veil of intensity when the ambiances embrace a short moment of rumbling. A line of sequences emerges and twirls its keys which twirl on the spot. Another line of sequences, lower and heavier, traces an upward movement, quite characteristic to the Berlin School, which needs percussions in order to bite into a livelier momentum. Frank D's guitar is always so seductive with solos flying over a good phase of progressive electronic rock. We slide towards "After 8 Hours", for after 8 hours straight of music, and its introduction inspired by the moments of romance and of wandering from Vangelis. Gradually, the music slides towards a kind of Jazz on a good tempo of Blues. The music is sweet and quite ethereal with Tangerine Dream perfumes, the Jive years, in the harmonies which get built and disintegrated between dense strata of vaporous mist. Let's say that it goes very well between the fury of "Lea Hall Brawl" and the very solid interpretation of "Acoustic Shadows". A title which no longer needs presentation and takes a whole new dimension with the percussions and the guitar riffs. The synths, sequencer and keyboards of Ron Boots and Stephan Whitlan add a depth and give an intense and absolutely stunning character to the music. A whole interpretation my friends! Frank D shines brightly on this album and finishes it with a solid performance in "Franky's Floyd" which offers an amalgam of Wish You Were Here and Comfortably Numb by Pink Floyd. The introduction is based on WYWH's wandering solos while the guitar gently flows towards the fabulous solos of Comfortably Numb. And it's as intense, if not more, than David Gilmour in the studio. That gives you an idea! But no matter, this is a solid interpretation of the quartet that gave me some chills. Shivers that I had also in the version of "Acoustic Shadows"! All and all, "An Evening with Friends" is a solid live album with superb renditions and some new improvised tracks. A must for fans of MorPheuSz and Ron Boots! Sylvain Lupari (February 6th, 2019)

80943 Wellenfeld - Elected Pieces 04-18

It was in 2008 that Wellenfeld released its first album, Sunshine, on MellowJet Records, the label of Bernd Scholl. This label, barely a year old, had previously reissued the first 3 albums (Cosmic Waves, Fusion, Trip to Illusion) of Wellenfeld who had left the label SynGate, like Bernd Scholl by the way. And since, 8 albums have followed, including a 10th soberly titled Ten in 2017. It's following this album that the idea of proposing a compilation germinated in the head of Bernd Scholl as well as those of Detlef Dominiczak and Andreas Braun. The basic idea was that each album of the German duo, from Cosmic Waves up to Ten, would be represented by a title in a chronological order. It was by relying on sales and the most popular titles on radio that "Elected Pieces 04-18", for 2004 to 2018, was born. And as Bernd Scholl never does things in half, he mastered this album with new sound perspectives to make a mosaic of 68 minutes that keeps us rivets to our headphones and / or to our speakers. We notice a change of sound depth with "Monolith", a title from Wellenfeld's first album that I humbly reviewed back in 2006. The sound is richer and the attack of the sonic ornaments as well as the cutting out of the orchestral layers are more enhanced. In fact, it's not superfluous to compare the sound aesthetics of this compilation to the musical strength that hides in the latest album of Moonbooter, Groundcontrol and the Victory of Mankind. For those of you who do not know Wellenfeld's music, let's say that it straddles a good New Berlin School, with a tone of synthesizers that is unique to the duo, and a form of EDM focused more on the harmony aspect than on wild beats. So, a lively and an especially harmonious music. Sometimes, the music is slow and languorous with a pulsating rhythm and a minimalist melody trapped in rich lunar orchestrations, like this other side of "Monolith". "Matrix" is of the same mold with a very good rhythmic melody which is also woven of earworm in large synth pads with interstellar orchestral perfumes. It's a bit the same with the slow and spheroidal rhythm of "Ring of Saturn" and the second part of which will see the light of day some 10 years later with Ten. "New York" announced this new musical style which was more on Dance when Wellenfeld has presented its first album on MellowJet Records. "Phase V" is in the mold of "Ring of Saturn", while "Summer Wind" is in the danceable, catchy and very commercial Synth-Pop. "Summerbreeze" is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful titles in the repertoire of Detlef Dominiczak and Andreas Braun. A very nice melody on a hopping rhythm, between pop and dance, is screwed in our ears here. "Brass of Devotion" comes from the Pandemie album. An album that I have not heard yet (it's missing to my collection) and that suspenseful film approach, like Chris Franke, is very appetizing. We are approaching the 2018 years with "Vintage Attack" which seduces with its many sequenced filaments twirling around a slow and pulsating rhythm that is in a way the signature of Wellenfeld. Here again the dense orchestrations envelop and slow down a rhythm which welcomes a melody that is not easy to pin down. "Ring of Saturn" was a good title from Ten, while "Ring Modular" strongly encourages us to discover the very good universe of Elements, one of the best albums from Wellenfeld. From one end to the other, "Elected Pieces 04-18" is a solid compilation with nearly 70 minutes of a very good EM from the duo Dominiczak & Braun. Bernd Scholl's mixing and sound enhancement makes of it a mosaic of heavy, slow rhythms that surround these beautiful Wellenfeld melodies. In my case, this is a great way to discover this duo that democratizes and simplifies the complexity of the world of synths and sequencers. Melodious and very accessible!
